THE NEWSLETTER OF THE

TEXAS JAIL ASSOCIATION

Vol. IX, No. 4 Fall 2006

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

President, Danny Downes

This year is slipping away quickly. By the time this issue reaches you, we will have gone through all of the painful recollections of 9/11. For some, this day is more painful than for others, but nonetheless a day that changed who we are and what we do as Americans. We will have had troops in Afghanistan for five years and in Iraq for nearly four years. I ask that each one of you, as you read this, take a moment and remember our troops serving abroad to show your appreciation for the sacrifices they make for us every day.

The Texas Jail Association is a thriving organization as evidenced by the recent Jail Management Issues Conference in South Padre Island. We had 178 attendees and 29 vendors (a new record) present at this conference. A good time was had by all. Participants were treated to first class training opportunities; a chance to network with old friends and make new ones; a look at vendors demonstrating the latest in jail equipment, technology and services; lots of good food; and some lively entertainment to help everybody enjoy the tropical climate of beautiful South Padre Island. There may be some pictures in this issue to help explain just what I am talking about!

I would like to thank Past President Kelly Rowe, Carla Stone, Robert Green, Mary Farley and the rest of the Board of Directors for all of the hard work performed to make the Jail Management Issues Conference a success. I would, of course, be remiss if I were not to mention Executive Director Sharese

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT cont'd

Hurst and her assistant Vanessa Farmer who, as usual, brought off all of the details of this conference without a hitch.

The upcoming regional trainings with the Texas Commission on Jail Standards and the Texas Association of Counties are in the final stages of preparation. Many of your TJA Board Members, along with representatives from TCJS and TAC will be visiting different areas of the state serving as facilitators for these programs. I urge you to support this process by looking for the locations and dates in this newsletter and making your plans to attend.

I know some individuals may be reading this who are not TJA members. I will address this portion of my letter to those who have not chosen to join the membership of the best jail association in the United States! I have been and I will always be a passionate supporter of this Association and I would like to recruit you as a member of the Texas Jail Association. Although our membership is considerable, it is only a tiny percentage of the men and women throughout the State of Texas who devote their time and efforts to the profession dedicated to the custody, care and control of those incarcerated in our county jails. As a member of the Texas Jail Association, not only do you get to enjoy the benefits of membership, but you can rest assured that you will be heard as part of the voice of the future in corrections. Nobody can deny that the leadership, past and present, of this Association is a force that is recognized and respected throughout our industry. Besides, what other nationally recognized professional organizations can you become a member of for a mere $20 a year?

I will leave you with this thought. As we go through our daily juggling act of issues such as health care delivery, MRSA, jail overcrowding, staffing shortages, aging facilities, new construction, security and safety of the public, staff and inmates, etc., we sometimes forget to show our appreciation to the workhorse of our industry, the detention officer. Without this stalwart group of officers acting as the glue that holds our county jails together where would we be? I would like to take this opportunity to thank all officers for the job they do and assure them they are appreciated more than they will ever know.

TEXAS JAIL ISSUES AUGUST 21-24, 2006

by Danny Downes

Texas Jail
Association President Danny Downesopened this year's Jail Management
Issues Conference
Monday morning
after the invocation

by Association Chaplain Tim Smith. President Downes welcomed everyone to the conference, introduced the Board of Directors and turned the floor over to Executive Director Sharese Hurst who delivered a brief welcome and orientation. She then introduced Doug Dretke. Mr. Dretke recently joined the Correctional Management Institute of Texas as Executive Director. He previously served as the TDCJ DirectorofCorrectional Institutions Division. Mr. Dretke took a few minutes to introduce himself to the group.

The first speaker at the conference, Mark Warren, spoke on Strategic Planning & Visioning in the morning and came back Monday afternoon with Communication from the Heart of a Leader and The One Minute Apology. Mr. Warren was well received, as he is a polished speaker with a delivery that keeps everyone on the edge of his seat. Monday evening everyone enjoyed drinks and appetizers at the poolside "Welcome Reception" provided by the host hotel, Radisson Resort South Padre Island.

Tuesday was an all-day affair with Bob Thornton, who spoke on work place safety during his topic Creating Quality Safety Training: An Administrator's Handbook.

Mr. Thornton is a well qualified expert on officer safety in the law enforcement area. He has numerous publications on staff and officer safety to his credit.

Wednesday began with the Texas Commission on Jail Standards' latest version of Current Issues. The Commission staff discussed jail issues and answered questions posed by the participants. After lunch on Wednesday, Carmella Smith from the Texas Association of Counties presented Supervising, Retaining & Motivating the Next Generation. She offered techniques to deal with the varied generations we are dealing with today. Wednesday evening everyone donned his favorite Hawaiian attire and enjoyed a "Hawaiian" style luau, made complete with a full meal, cocktails and Polynesian dancers.

Rounding out the week and finishing up the Conference Thursday morning we were very fortunate to have Steve Chalender with the Texas Association of Counties speak on Risky Business. This presentation has been presented at other locations around the state and is always popular with the participants. Finally, the conference came to an end and door prizes were passed out as everybody prepared for the trip home.

All good things must come to an end, but not before we thank those behind the scenes. Second Vice-President Robert

Green and the Board of Directors of the Texas Jail Association put together a great conference for the membership. As usual Sharese Hurst, assisted by Vanessa Farmer, kept the show on track with attention to all of the details necessary to have a successful conference. The staff at the Radisson Resort was exceptional, as usual, in providing help whenever it was requested. Lest we not forget that Carmella

Smith and Steve Chalendar, with Texas Association of Counties, were on hand again to provide audio/ visual support. Thanks for another successful conference in South Padre. See you next year!

MEMBERSHIP SCHOLARSHIP FUND

In an effort to promote membership, the Texas Jail Association (TJA) is in the process of instituting a scholarship fund by which officers interested in becoming members can receive assistance with membership fees. The program will serve two purposes:

- (1) Provide a vendor with valuable advertisement and recognition for their services and
- (2) offer the means by which smaller counties can receive TJA information and provide officers in these counties with the opportunity of receiving the training in various correctional fields.

TJA has requested contributions from vendors throughout the state in order to develop the scholarship fund. The agencies and companies that have supported us throughout the years have played an integral role in the success of the TJA conferences. Their continued support is needed for the success of the program. Vendors contributing to the scholarship fund will be recognized in our quarterly news bulletin and at the TJA conferences.

Vendors interested in sponsoring members may contact Mary Farley at (254) 933-5783 or email: mary.farley@co.bell.tx.us.

by Karl Wiess

I wanted to thank all the vendors that were at the Texas Jail Association Jail Management Issues Conference. In addition, I want to express appreciation to all those exhibitors that could not make it, but still contributed to make the conference a great success. It is with the help of such vendors that the conference is enjoyable and productive for everyone.

I wanted to also thank all the Texas Jail Association Board members for all the help with the vendors, especially Sharese Hurst. As a vendor, it is great being able to work with such a great group of people that want to make the conference as beneficial to us as possible. Martha Nivens
Wise County Sheriff's Department

There are three members on our team: Martha Nivens, Debbie Taylor, and Jessica Sims. The three of us work together at the Wise County Sheriff's Department located in Decatur, Texas. We have been friends and co-workers for many years.

This will be our first time to participate in the Susan G. Komen 3-Day Walk for breast cancer. My mother, Helen Flores, recently passed away after a long battle with breast cancer. We will be walking in her memory. Debbie was there for our family throughout the surgery, chemotherapy and radiation, as well as being available to help out in any capacity that Mom or I needed. My mother basically adopted Debbie into our family.

When it comes to fund-raising, Debbie is the source of our motivation. She comes up with various ideas and keeps us inspired and on course. We have held numerous dinners, bake sales and raffles to kick start our fundraising. We also had 3-Texas State Seals made (one hand carved out of oak, and two sandblasted into glass) that were raffled off at the TJA Jail Management Issues Conference in South Padre, which Jessica and I attended. Thanks to all that supported us, we were able to raise $1025.00 dollars. The winners of the Texas State Seals were:

Tom Worsham – Grayson County Mary Barron - Nacogdoches County Mary Bledsoe – Blanco County

We are not to far from our endeavor and we are excited. We appreciate all those that have supported us in our fundraising efforts. We would like to also thank the Texas Jail Association for allowing us to be a part of the South Padre Jail Conference.

Thank You, Martha Nivens, Debbie Taylor, Jessica Sims Wise County Sheriff's Department

"TJA IDOL"

As your President, it is my responsibility to recruit someone to sing the National Anthem at the Spring Conference, our Association's annual business meeting. As I sometimes do, I was thinking "out loud," via email, to Executive Director Sharese Hurst and asked her if she thought it would be a good idea to have a contest for those who might like to sing the National Anthem at our Spring Conference. She immediately responded by praising my "creativity" and assuring me that I had stumbled on an excellent idea. So here is how this process will work!

If you are a Texas Jail Association member, or eligible to become one, then you can submit an entry! Interested contestants should send a CD with a recording of themselves singing the National Anthem. The winning contestant will receive free conference registration, hotel accommodations and membership for one year.

The Texas Jail Association Entertainment Committee will choose one contestant who will sing the National Anthem at the Spring Conference during the opening ceremony on May 13, 2007.

All entries must be received no later than March 1, 2007. Entries must be accompanied by a letter from the contestant's Sheriff endorsing and committing his/her support to this process.

Visit the TJA website, www.texasjailassociation.com, for a entry form.

TJA MEMBERS RETURN FROM POLAND

by David Drosche

A diverse group of 16 individuals traveled to Poland to represent the Law Enforcement Management Institute of Texas (LEMIT) in the Study Abroad International Police Program this summer. LEMIT sponsored four Leadership Command College (LCC) graduates to represent the Institute along with 12 other individuals. This program was offered through the Sam Houston State University College of Criminal Justice.

The four LCC graduates whom were selected to represent not only LEMIT, but also the State of Texas, their respective agencies, and their individual communities were:

Lieutenant David Drosche, Brazos County Sheriff's Office (TJA Treasurer); Lieutenant Dan Norris, Montgomery County Sheriff's Office (TJA member); Lieutenant Bill Sala, Memorial Villages Police Department; and Sergeant Michael (Shane) Krajewski, Rusk County Sheriff's Office.

Also on this trip were the LEMIT International and Special Policing Programs Coordinator Carolyn Martinez, Chief Lori Harris, Windcrest Police Department; Lt. Kelsey Hines, Dallas Police Department; two graduate students and seven undergraduate students. These officers and students attended the International Police Program in Poland from July 23, 2006 to August 5, 2006.

This group was able to learn about Polish Law and the Poland National Police Force. There were several different topics covered on this trip, which included: History of Poland and the Slupsk Police School, Justice System in Poland, Criminal Code, Criminal Investigation, Prevention, Water Rescue, Crowd Management, Public Order and the Schengen Information System. This trip showed all who attended that there is not much difference between Poland and the United States. Our ways of training officers are more or less the same, although Poland trains all of its officers in more detail at Basic Training and the United States sends officers to specialized training later in their career. It was amazing to see how far along the Polish National Police have been able to advance in the mere 16 years of its existence.

These participants were also able to see and hear about the extreme history of Poland throughout centuries of unrest. Poland went through several centuries of trying times, from the Medieval Period to the World Wars to Communism to its current status. The group was able to visit several historic towns, such as: Slupsk, Ustka, Sopot, Gdynia, Gdansk, and Warsaw. They were also able to visit the largest Medieval Castle in the world in Malbork.

All of the participants were able to make many international contacts and communicate with officers of all ranks and from several different divisions. Participants discovered that participation in this program is a wonderful opportunity to exchange information internationally. With crime being a global issue, journeying across international boundaries opens the door to create a network of cooperation among countries. Our support of these officers and students enables them to actively participate in this program and will facilitate the ongoing creation of these international affiliations.

On the second to the last night in Poland, the group enjoyed a farewell dinner in Ustka with all of the division Directors of the Police School in Slupsk. At this dinner, the participants were able to show their gratitude to certain officials of Poland. Lt. Dan Norris presented a Montgomery County Sheriff's Office badge and Lt. David Drosche presented a Texas Jail Association cap and a Brazos County Sheriff's Office patch to Slupsk Police School Commandant Stanislaw Bukowski, who is also a LEMIT graduate.

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER FAITHFUL IN STEWARDSHIP

by Tim Smith

Matthew 25:14 -30

In recent years we have heard a lot about 'family values', 'morality', and 'integrity'. In this article I want to consider what they are and how they should impact our lives as Christians.

Let's consider some definitions because we need to understand what it is we are talking about:

- Value: The worth or importance of something
- Morals: Principles of right and wrong behavior
- Integrity: Adherence to a code of moral values. Completeness or honesty.

Now all of these terms can be applied differently depending upon what we use as a standard. The standard changes the values, the morals, and a person's integrity. Note the term 'honor among thieves'. The standard by which we must define and apply these terms must be the Word of God. It cannot be society because society changes. It cannot be knowledge, because that too changes. It must be the only thing in our world that doesn't change, the Word of an unchanging God.

Every person on this earth is a citizen of one of two different worlds. If he is an unbeliever, he belongs to the world of darkness (Col. 1:13a). If he is a Christian, he is a member of the world of light. Colossians 1:12 – 14 says "Giving thanks unto the Father, which hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light: Who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son: In whom we have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of sins". Each world has its own system of truth and values: Therefore, the Christian and the unbeliever have radically different identities and views.

The Bible uses the word "darkness" to describe the world of sin. This darkness, which entered the world at the Fall, is the domain of Satan and his spirit helpers (Eph. 6:11-12). Satan has set the secular, material, man-centered and often immoral philosophy that is so prevalent in the world. Like physical darkness, this spiritual darkness blinds. The key is learning to distinguish between the two systems and thereby develop a view with Biblical values and goals.

God sent His Son to be the Light of the World, to deliver us all from this darkness and into His marvelous light (1 Peter 2:9). God provides in His Word all we need to know to make right choices. He has provided role models and examples (both positive and negative) we can learn from.

Having been delivered from the darkness into the light, and having adopted God's values instead of the world's, the believer's life takes on a unique significance. Every believer has one primary occupation: being a steward, or manager, of the resources God has entrusted to him. A faithful steward recognizes that life is a holy trust from God. Being a steward involves understanding three principles: God's ownership, our responsibility and our accountability.

First, God's ownership. We can compare God to the master in this parable. He owns everything in the world; nevertheless He entrusts his servants (believers) with the responsibility of managing His resources for Him. God sovereignly decides what resources He will place in the hands of each of His servants. He decides which ones and how many each of us will have. God owns everything (Ps. 50:10-12). He is the creator: "He made us."

Second, our responsibility. Each believer is like one of the servants in the parable. We are either faithful or unfaithful. The faithful servants put their master's talents to good use, investing them, making them count. The unfaithful steward dug a hole and squirreled his away, wasting it. A faithful Christian uses what God has given him in the wisest possible way, which brings glory to Him.

Third, our accountability. When the master returned from his journey, he called each servant into His presence and required a face-to- face report from each one on how he'd managed his possessions. We, too, will answer for how we've used our master's resources. 2 COR 5:10 says "FOR WE MUST ALL APPEAR BEFORE THE JUDGMENT SEAT OF CHRIST; THAT EVERY ONE MAY RECEIVE THE THINGS DONE IN HIS BODY, ACCORDING TO THAT HE HATH DONE, WHETHER IT BE GOOD OR BAD." At the Judgment Seat of Christ, God will judge us on how we've managed the time, money, spiritual gifts and possessions He entrusted to us. The unprofitable servant in Jesus' story did not get away with being lazy and unproductive. He had to look his master in the face and explain his actions. Instead of owning up to his poor stewardship, he chose to make excuses (Matt. 25:24-25).

How easy it is for us to justify what we want to do and rationalize away what we do not want to do! Success, joy and fulfillment can be ours if we acknowledge God's ownership, our responsibility and the fact that we will be held accountable for His resources and dedicate ourselves to being faithful stewards.

LUBBOCK BETTING INMATE LABOR PROGRAM SAVES MORE THAN TAX DOLLARS

Beth Aaron Avalanche-Journal

A new inmate labor program approved by the Lubbock City Council has the potential to rebuild lives while beautifying the city and saving tax dollars.

City officials believe using non-violent offenders housed at the Lubbock County Jail to clean up the Depot Entertainment District and other areas of the Hub City will save money and give incarcerated persons something positive to do.

"(The city is) utilizing inmate labor to basically focus on areas around Lubbock that need extra attention," Emergency Operations Manager Kevin Overstreet said. "It's a win-win for the city, for the county and for the inmates and for the citizens."

Earlier this month, city council members unanimously approved the inmate labor program with an estimated budget of $105,000. The money will cover fuel, supplies and salaries for two Sheriff's deputies who will be hired to supervise the laborers.

If 12 people were hired for manual labor and paid $10 an hour plus benefits, it would cost the city about $404,000, Overstreet said. The inmate labor program will save the city more than $200,000.

Joe Don Buckner / Staff Lubbock County Jail inmates wash a deputy's car Monday afternoon.

"Everything's expensive nowadays and we have to maximize our resources," he said. "We just need to look at other options . . . that are available to us to do what we can to make the city look pretty."

Once the program is under way, two groups of six to seven county inmates will be asked to volunteer to pick up trash, trim trees and cut grass throughout the city for eight to nine hours a day, Overstreet said.

Only non-violent inmates charged with class B and class A misdemeanors will be eligible to participate in the program.

"The citizens should not be worried about any liability issues," Sheriff David Gutierrez said. "And we will select minimal risk inmates to provide the labor force."

If an inmate were to try to escape while participating in the labor program, he could face up to 10 additional years in jail, Overstreet said. Many inmates at the Lubbock County Jail are serving sentences of six months to two years.

Laborers may receive up to three days off their original jail sentence for each full day of work, as allowed by state law. A 30-minute lunch break and on-site rest rooms will also be provided, Overstreet said.

This is the first time the city and county have worked together on funding a program to benefit the community, city council member Phyllis Jones said.

"I think it's a very positive thing," she said. "The county has the labor force, and the city is not having to spend that money on labor."

The biggest payoff for inmates is a boost in self-esteem, said a jail official. The opportunity to work in the community and spend time outside of a jail cell makes inmates feel more like free people.

Gary Lawrence, CEO of The Lubbock Economic Development Alliance said he hopes inmates who have the opportunity to improve the community also will make the contacts they need to get a job once they are released from jail.

"It puts people that are not really doing anything - to work," he said. "The money is a side issue."

Lubbock County Commissioners will decide whether to approve the inmate labor program at Monday's meeting, said County Judge Tom Head.

Sheriff David Gutierrez has worked closely with commissioners on this project and believes the program will be approved.

"I expect the commissioners to embrace this interlocal agreement," he said. "I think this is a first for many other programs that we could be working with together in the city and county."

If the county approves the program, citizens could begin seeing workers wearing orange as soon as August.

benefit of county offices and non-profits.

WEATHERFORD - At this furniture manufacturing shop, saws buzz, sanders hum and routers whirr as they grind away on wood. But the finished products here won't go to stores, and the workers wear orange uniforms that read "Parker Co. Jail Trusty."

The woodworkers are in an inmate education program, and they're building furniture for the benefit of the county and nonprofit organizations. They're also learning a trade that they can use when they get out of jail, county officials said. "Working out here sure beats sitting in a cell all day," said David Simmons, a jail trusty and program participant.

The county is taking advantage of a state law that allows free inmate labor to be used to benefit the county, Parker County Sheriff Larry Fowler said. Participation in the woodworking shop is voluntary.

Recently, the law was expanded to allow work to benefit nonprofits and charities, and trusties have done work for the Hope Foundation, Grace House and others, Fowler said.

Fowler, who took office last year, said he inherited a jail and offices that were in disrepair. Since then, the jail's administrative offices have been redone, complete with Western-heritage furnishings, he said. The work includes Fowler's desk, a large oak piece with the county's logo and rope trim that he said shows great craftsmanship.

Larry Jergins, who heads the program at a cabinet shop in Weatherford, said he's taught woodworking to more than 25 trusties since the program started. He estimates that it saved the county $160,000 the last two years. "It's a win-win situation," Fowler said.

In Parker County, only two trusties have ever walked away from work details. One was gone nine hours before he was picked up, and the other was missing three hours before he was rearrested, Fowler said.

The operation started with a bare-bones carpenter shop, but now it's a full-blown furniture manufacturing facility including professional-grade saws, sanders and routers and a paint booth. The facility has produced work for the newly restored courthouse, the district courts building, the sheriff's office and other offices.

Experience is helpful but not necessary, said Jergins, who had a construction business before working for the county. "Once they learn, I supervise, but I like for them to make some of their own choices, like what kind of wood to use and design," Jergins said. "I give them dimensions for what is needed and allow them to be creative. That gives them a sense of pride and ownership."

Simmons, 36, a trusty who is headed to prison for burglary and family violence, said he likes the work. "First I worked in the laundry room, and I know I'd rather be working with wood," he said. Trusty Allen Notware, 45, is serving time for possession of marijuana. He said he learned to frame houses from his father. Jergins "tells me what he wants, and I put it together," he said. Jergins, a certified precinct jailer, picks the men up at 8 a.m. each weekday. The crew works all day and doesn't mind overtime, he said. "The worst part of the day is heading back to jail," Simmons said.

IN REMEMBRANCE...

I would ask the readers of this newsletter for a moment of indulgence while I remember someone who was very special, not only to me, but to our organization. In April of this year we lost Officer Margaret "Margi" Fesperman to her valiant battle with cancer.

From the moment of her arrival at the Lubbock County Sheriff's Office it was quickly apparent that she would be someone special and a truly exceptional corrections professional. I was exceedingly fortunate to know and be able to work with Margi on several different levels. As the Captain in the Detention Division, I saw first hand how she conducted her business as a corrections officer and later as a Training Officer, and how she demonstrated her expertise in every facet of her assignment.

Later, she volunteered and was selected for the Honor Guard. For someone with no experience, heading into a unit like this could easily have become overwhelming. Yet again, she showed tremendous resolve and determination as she became one of the best, setting an example for all others to follow. Seeing this drive, I made the easy decision to move her into a position of leadership within that team to Adjutant, and with that she took over all the administrative and scheduling responsibilities for the Honor Guard.

Approximately two years ago, an idea was brought forward to pursue the Lubbock Regional Public Safety Memorial. Margi was selected to represent the Sheriff's Office for this endeavor. As with all other responsibilities, she gave everything she had to see that the project went from an idea to a reality. In fact, and as fortune would have it, once a sculptor was selected Margi was our representative and model for the actual statue. The Sheriff's Office recognized her service and hard work on that project by presenting her with the Meritorious Service Award in 2004.

Margi's final assignment came after being selected to the Office of Transition Planning for our new detention facility. It certainly was no surprise that like everything else, she jumped right in and made a difference. Even when she became ill, she maintained that "trooper" attitude which I had come to know over the years. She even continued working at home through her tough cancer treatments.

This will be one of my fondest memories of Margi. As we were preparing for her funeral and all of the honors we were going to be conducting, her husband Randy told me some of her final words. This was a message I know I should have been expecting. She told her husband simply this, "Tell my boys they had better not screw up."

Officer Margaret "Margi" Fesperman 1949-2006 She embodied that true one percent. We will all miss her deeply.

MARGI FESPERMAN

Margi Fesperman, 56, died Friday, April 28, 2006 at her home. Born on May 7, 1949 in Tacoma, Washington, she moved to Levelland in 1990 from Waco, Texas. She married Randall Fesperman on October 1, 1988 in Waco. They were the last couple to marry in the Brookview Methodist Church prior to its consolidation.

Fesperman was working as a transition team member for the Lubbock County Sheriff's Office and had been a corrections officer with that same office. She was awarded the Meritorious Service Award by the Lubbock County Sheriff's Office in December 2004.

Fesperman was also a Field Training Officer for the Lubbock County Sheriff's Office. In addition, she was a member of the Lubbock County Sheriff's Office Honor Guard and served as Adjutant. She had worked for the Levelland Schools as an aide. She will receive her associate's degree in law enforcement technology from South Plains College in May. She was preceded in death by her parents, and a brother, Kenny Bowles in 2005.

Survivors include her husband, Randy Fesperman of Levelland, five sons, Gary Lee Vassar, Jr. and his wife, Liz of Charleston, SC, Mark Wayne Vassar and his wife, Rhonda, of Ft. Worth, TX, William Justin Vassar of Enid, OK, Michael Scott Vassar of Levelland, Randall David Fesperman of Austin, a daughter, Kristina Mae Wiatrek of Austin, two brothers, Jasper Maryland Stanley, Jr. and Joseph William Stanley, both of Spokane, WA, two sisters, Maryland Louise Gooch of Spokane, WA, and Anette Windsor of Olympia, WA, and eight grandchildren.

MONEY-SAVER FOR COUNTIES: GET INMATES PAPER-READY, FASTER

by Jim Lewis

For counties, an expensive aspect of the criminal justice system is the cost of holding jail inmates who have been convicted but who aren't ready to go to prison, just because their paperwork is not done yet. A series of workshops in the next few months will help change that, according to Dimitria Pope, director of the Research, Evaluation & Development (RED) Group of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice.

At present, an inmate who has been convicted and sentenced to prison, state jail or a state substance abuse program is not eligible to be accepted into the TDCJ system until all their documents are assembled from various county offices – jail, district clerk, court administrators and district attorney, primarily. Once that "pen packet" is assembled, TDCJ is required by law to accept the inmate within 45 days – actually, the average waiting time these days is 18 days. But, what really drives up the jail budget is the time it takes for the six pages of documents to be assembled. And if the pen packet is not prepared correctly, the delay is even longer while TDCJ admissions staff members call the counties to get it right.

To address the problem, the RED group has achieved what bureaucracies rarely accomplish: they've reconfigured the required paperwork so that instead of six pages, now it is only one. "We got all the appropriate staff together to look at all the information that we were asking counties to send us and asked ourselves, 'why do we need all this, and in particular, which information do we really need?" explained Pope. The result is as one-page checklist that should be easier and quicker to complete, she said.

But such a significant change in bureaucratic procedures will take some explaining, so TDCJ is planning to host a series of regional workshops over the next few months to lay out how it will work as well as to get feedback from county officials staff on what further adjustments need to be made. "Different counties use different technologies, software or paper documents and all that has to be taken into account," Mary Strong, director of program evaluation for the RED Group. "We want counties to understand that we're trying to make this a two-way, collaborative process. We will work with you."

That's where the upcoming seminars come in. "The hope is that by bringing in the appropriate jail, clerk, court administration and prosecutor staff members to go over the new process, it will help the counties save money by getting the job done accurately the first time," Strong said.

Dates and locations of the regional seminars will be scheduled in the next few weeks and publicized via Texas Association of Counties publications, mail and email.

BLANCO COUNTY JAIL COULD BE THE OLDEST ONE STILL IN USE IN TEXAS

Roger Croteau
Express-News Staff Writer

JOHNSON CITY — Lots of people spend top dollar to stay in less historic accommodations. But while the Blanco County Jail may be more historic than most Hill Country bed-and-breakfast inns, the rooms here are definitely more Spartan.

It is one of the oldest, if not the oldest, jail still in use in Texas. Built of large limestone blocks, the small twostory building on the courthouse square looks, from the outside, pretty much like it did at the turn of the 20th century.

"It does the job," said Blanco County Sheriff's Department Capt. Steve Frederick. "It's definitely not fancy. The cells are all cinder block. The second floor doesn't have air conditioning, but the limestone walls keep it pretty cool up there."

It is also one the state's smallest jails, holding seven inmates at capacity.

The inmates have little room to move around between their small cells and the 300-square-foot day room, which also houses the shower.

The county seat moved from Blanco to Johnson City in 1890, and for four years prisoners were kept in the basement of the James P. Johnson building, which was used as a courthouse until a new one was built.

It was damp, dark and unhealthy, and in 1893 the county commissioners splurged, spending $6,450 to build the jail, which was completed the next year and has been in service ever since.

The county sheriff used to live in the bottom floor, and later a jailer lived there, a practice that ended in the 1960s, about the same time office space was added, Frederick said.

(Tom Reel/Express-News)
Capt. Steve Frederick of the Blanco County Sheriff's Department shows a cell in the jail in the Blanco County Courthouse in Johnson City. 'It does the job,' Frederick says of the building with cinder block cells inside and limestone blocks outside.

Inside, Alison Klein sits alone, manning the phones at the Blanco County 911 center in the lobby of the county jail. She's also the jailer, cook, dishwasher, custodian and jail nurse. And she does all the laundry. "Tuna sandwiches for lunch today," she said, checking the menu. "And dinner is going to be baked chicken, potatoes and green beans. They all gain weight while they're here. Hardly any of them fit in their pants when they leave. So I guess the food is OK."

Klein has to check on the inmates once an hour, so she leaves one baby monitor on the desk and brings the other one with her, so if the 911 line rings she can hear it and rush back to answer the call.

But it's not a problem, she said. Since the jail is so small, it only takes about 90 seconds to complete the hourly rounds.

County Sheriff William Elsbury said he doesn't know of an older jail still in use, but added that with remodeling done over the years, the jail suits the county's needs.

The growing county has seen an increase in arrests, and has to spend about $45,000 a year to house inmates in the Kerr County Jail, but that's still cheaper than building a new jail, Elsbury said.

And it only seems right that a jail this old should have its own ghost story.

As locals tell it, the Blanco County Jail is haunted by not one but two ghosts: a man and a woman, although no one can even speculate as to whom the specters were in life.

"Some of the inmates do say they hear voices and things move around," said Klein, who sometimes works the graveyard shift alone. "I've never seen anything. Well, sometimes when you work the midnight shift you think you catch movement out of the corner of your eye, but that's probably just from knowing you're the only one on duty and your mind plays tricks on you."

The jail's most well-known guest was musician Jerry Jeff Walker, picked up on a drunken driving charge in 1991 on his way from Luckenbach to Austin after playing a concert with Willie Nelson and Waylon Jennings, Frederick said.

Escape attempts have been rare — just one during Elsbury's tenure. The inmate, who knocked over a guard, was caught hiding still inside the jail. But in 1995 an inmate escaped the exercise yard and was caught about 2 miles out of town, hitchhiking and still wearing his orange jail uniform.
